NEW PARKING ORDINANCE IS APPROVED

One Hour on Brand Between Harvard and
Wilson

LAW IS AMENDED

Storekeepers on North
Brand Achieve Their Object

PARKING RULES
BRAND BOULEVARD
Harvard to Wilson.....One hour
Wilson to California.....No limit

ELSEWHERE ON BRAND
Between California
and Colorado.....Two hours

BROADWAY
Central to Louise.....Two hours

The parking ordinance was amended last night by the city council so as to provide for a one-hour
parking limit on Brand boulevard
between Harvard and Wilson
streets, and for unrestricted parking
on Brand between Wilson and California.

The remainder of the parking ordinance as originally adopted will be restrained, this being two-hour parking on Broadway from Central to Louise, and on Brand from California to Colorado, with the exception of the sections mentioned.

This action was taken on motion of Councilman Stevenson and in response to petitions filed with the board by a majority of the business men in the districts effected.

At a previous meeting the storekeepers on Brand boulevard from Wilson to California asked that unlimited parking be permitted in this block. This resulted in this block being named an unrestricted district. At last night's meeting
two petitions were presented, asking that a one-hour limit be put into effect between Wilson and Harvard on Brand boulevard. In response to this petition the one-hour limit was adopted for this stretch of Brand.

The amendment to the parking ordinance also provided for the prohibiting the parking of pleasure or business vehicles on any of the streets in the parking districts between the hour of 1 o'clock in the morning and daybreak, this latter action being taken on recommendation of Police Chief Fraser.

The action of the council came after a lengthy discussion on the parking question. The fireworks were started by Dan Kelly, of the hardware firm of Cornwell & Kelly
of South Brand.

"I am representing a majority of the merchants on Brand boulevard between Harvard and Broadway. We are the fellows who are paying the high rent. The parking privilege along our block is being abused. So critical is the situation becoming that it is impossible for buyers in automobiles coming into our stores. Most of the people are parking their cars unjustly.
Some realize this, others do not."

"Suppose a man comes from any of the outlying districts and wants to get into one of the stores in the blocks between Wilson and Harvard on Brand. All of the parking spaces are occupied and he cannot get in. He naturally goes up the street a block or so, and the chances are the business that would have come to us, who pay
the highest rents, goes to our competitors, whose rents are lower. The fellow who keeps a store
out in the comparatively low-rent
district will get the business because it is driven from our stores
on account of the parking spaces being filled. This practice of having our streets packed at all times drives our business to them. It is just a question of having the streets filled with dead ones, or have it half filled with live ones,
with plenty of space for others to come."

"The customers are complaining to us about this condition. They two-hour ordinance does not fill the bill. It permits the carowner to move his machine once in the afternoon and once in the morning,
and thereby keep out of the hand
of the law."

"I have been against this parking law from the first," said Councilman Davis, "principally because it was not petitioned for by the business men. If the storekeepers will bring in their petition in this matter, I will be only too glad to give them what they desire."

A. G. Spahr, proprietor of the drugstore at the corner of Brand
and Broadway, presented a petition for a one-hour parking law between Broadway and Wilson on Brand, and in support of his petition stated that practically everyone in his block had signed it without any persuasion being used in any way.

Mr. Pendroy, president of the Pendroy dry goods company, corner of Brand and Harvard, and A.
T. Cowan, proprietor of the Glendale News, presented arguments
against the adoption of a one-hour parking law.

"I grant that some remedy for the trouble should be devised and put into effect, but I believe you will do more harm than good by taking people into court for violat-

Misinformation on Crime Is Causing Confusion, Says James

Because of lengthy preach-ments on crime, confusion is being created in the public mind, says Henry James, in his comment on the day's news.

He speaks of the plea being made for the abolition of prisons and capital punishment
which has been cited as murder. In no uncertain manner
he expresses his opinion
against such piffle.

"It is the thought and the ideal and the will that they are the directing forces that touch the keys, set down the thought; mark life." This is the philosophy expressed in the Listening Post by James W. Foley this evening. It is one of the most interesting of his articles that has ever been given you the privilege to read and it's worth your while to peruse it.

There are four editorials
dealing with vital subjects of interest to everyone. One is on the unemployment problem,
the topic which has been on the lips of every one for months. Besides this there is one on Sir Henry Wilson who met death at the hands of an assassin.

The first installment of a scientific article dealing with evolution is offered you this evening, the concluding chapter to be printed tomorrow.

Completing the editorial
page this evening are feature
articles by John Pilgrim, Della Stewart, Eastern Point of View
and the Right Word.

CATHOLIC CHARITY FUND CAMPAIGN CALLED OFF

Collection Taken at Parish Church Makes Drive
Unnecessary

The Glendale Knights of Columbus have called off the local drive for funds for Catholic charities. Instead of the drive a collection was taken for this purpose Sunday at the parish church. This collection was so successful that the drive
was unnecessary.

The committee in charge of the work here was called to a meeting
last night at Ye White Inn cafeteria and discharged as their work
was ended.

The members of the committee
were: J. W. Andree, chairman;
Frank Leslie and J. H. Chappins.

The campaign for funds to have been held in Glendale was a part of the diocese program to raise $50,000 for the Bureau of Catholic charities. This bureau is a diocesan office directed by the Right Reverend Bishop J. J. Cantwell, D.
D. It cares for, in a systematic way, orphans, abandoned and destitute children, juvenile delinquents,
poor immigrants, families in distress, pre-trial children and the poor who cannot pay for medical examination and treatment.

The work of the bureau is divided into four departments: Child welfare, family welfare, immigrant welfare and correctional work. The bureau is at present doing this work in the nine counties of the diocese and handles cases from practically every state in the Union and from the Philippines. What the bureau is a Catholic institution
it also cares for non-Catholics.

While the drive in Glendale has been discontinued it is announced that other towns and cities in the diocese will continue with the fund
campaign until the entire $50,000
has been raised.

SPECIAL AGENT OF K. C. TO ARRIVE

The Glendale Knights of Columbus are expecting a big time on the night of July 5, when Robert A.
McKenzie, special agent, representing the central office of the order,
will visit in Glendale.

Mr. McKenzie will give a talk on the work of the order, and instructions along these lines. He will also be the guest of honor at a luncheon to be held at Ye White Inn.

ing an ordinance of this character.
I believe that something of this character will have to come, but I believe it is not time for it right
now. We can reach the professional men and have them park
their machines on the side streets.
I feel that we should maintain the friendly spirit as much as possible."

"Glendale's streets are wide,"
said Mr. Cowan, "and for this reason I believe the limit to the time of parking should be lifted. The 45-minute parking limit in Los Angeles has, I believe, lost it a great deal of business. The people of the country districts will not go to Los Angeles and run a chance of being fined."

In moving that the one-hour
amendment to the parking ordinance be made Councilman Stevenson said:

"I have said right along that I am in favor of giving the merchants just what they want in this matter. These petitions are overwhelmingly in favor of the one-hour law, and I am in favor of giving it to them."

CHARLES O. GOLDEN DROPS DEAD AT GARDENA

Owner of Ferris Wheel
Which Made Success
of Recent Fiesta

Sad news has come to members of the Glendale Merchants' baseball club. Word has been received that Charles O. Golden, owner of the Ferris wheel operated at the ball club's fiesta, dropped dead at Gardena last Sunday. Mr. Golden
died while taking down his wheel,
preparatory to leaving that city.

Mr. and Mrs. Golden were planning to make their home in this city.

The deceased leaves a widow,
who will probably join friends in Glendale. The word of Mr. Golden's death was received by C. M.
Young of this city.

The funeral services were held at 3:30 p. m. today, at the undertaking parlors of Booth & Bolyston in Los Angeles, and conducted by the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which Mr. Golden was a life member.

Interment will be in Forest Lawn. The services at the grave will be conducted by the Roosevelt camp, United Spanish War Veterans. Mr. Golden was a member of this camp and had just made application to transfer his membership to the Glendale camp.

The deceased numbered his friends by the score in Southern California. He was known as an open-hearted, generous, clean man.
His brief stay in Glendale with the carnival won him many new friends, especially among the boys and girls.

THUGS ATTEMPT HOLDUP ON BRAND

Drive Up Alongside of B.
Carleton's Car; He Steps on Her

Three thugs attempted to hold up B. Carleton of 1135 East Elk street on South Brand boulevard,
shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. Carleton was returning to his home in his machine when the criminals drove up alongside.
When he saw what the intent of the three men were, Carleton
stepped on the throttle and outdistanced the holdup men. He reported the matter to the Glendale police immediately and Officers Kerns, Minn and Belgard were sent to investigate, but the car
containing the would-be criminals
could not be located.

Veterans' Bureau Work Is Attacked in Convention

SAN FRANCISCO, June 27.
—Lines were being drawn today for a stiff fight over the conduct of the national veterans' bureau in charge of rehabilitation work, before the national convention of Disabled Veterans of the World war.

The discussion was expected to reach the floor of the convention late today or tomorrow.

The latest fuel to be added to the fire in which at least a portion of the organization expects to "scorch the veterans'
bureau came from Camp Sherman, Ohio.

A committee of three students from the training center
there arrived last night with 450 affidavits which, they said,
charged inefficiency in almost every phase of the work.

Colonel Charles R. Forbes,
head of the government veterans' bureau, will appear on the floor of the convention "not in defense of the bureau but ready to answer any questions," he said.

A feature of today will be the veterans' parade, headed by the
"living hall of fame," composed of the "greatest hero"
from each state in the Union.

MAJOR BUTTS WINS CREDIT MEN'S CONTEST

Closing of Membership Drive Finds Potter Will
Be Host at Dinner

The meeting on Monday of the Merchants' Credit association at the chamber of commerce marked
the close of the membership contest which has been waging for the past two weeks. Major Butts' team came out head. The losing team under the leadership of Major Potter will have the pleasure of dining the entire membership in the near future—how, when and where, to be determined later.

New members voted into the organization through the efforts of Major Butts' division were Tainier
& Hall, the Glendale Mill, Baldwin Shirt Co., Pope & Toller, the Henry-Brown Co., Williams Dry
Goods Co., Smith Electrical Co.,
New members credited to Major
Potter's division, were Enterprise
Furniture Co., Green Hill Beverage
Co., A. G. Spahr, Dr. David A.
Baker, Glendale Electric Co., and H. M. Kuhn of the E. W. Cizek
auto electric company.

The main subject of discussion
was that of the parking ordinance
which is in process of being repealed at this time by the city council.

Earl C. Pendroy expressed himself as being opposed to a parking ordinance and leaving it to the civic pride of the merchants, clerks and professional and business men
all day in the busy thoroughfares
where, by so doing they will deprive customers of a convenient short-time parking place. Other members felt that a strict parking ordinance should be maintained
its rules strictly adhered to.

A committee consisting of Max
Green, Earl C. Pendroy, A. G.
Spahr, Dan Kelly and F. A. Butts, was appointed to outline some
plan of taking care of the downtown parking which will be satisfactory to the merchants concerned, and to make a recommendation to the association at next week's meeting.

Secretary Pilling reported that he had thus far been unsuccessful
in interesting the wholesale houses
in the program to take space in the annual picnic in August, and suggested the plan, which was adopted, of having each individual merchant take the matter up with the wholesalers with whom they dealt.
This, it was said, was necessary in order to defray the expenses of the picnic.

While on the island the scouts
will be under the direction of able adults. There will be an adult in charge of each tent. These leaders will form the executive council
of the camp.

According to the latest plans the
last meal in camp will be a mammoth watermelon feast.

tion to the routine business, reports of the commissioners, who were in attendance at the general assembly at Des Moines, will be given. The meeting will continue throughout the day.

YEGGS FAIL IN BURBANK BANK RAID

Burglar Alarm Warns
Police As Thieves
Tackle Vault

CAPTURED IN FLIGHT

Enter Premises by Smashing Plateglass Window
and Ransack Offices

BURBANK, June 27.—Burglars
entering the State Bank of Burbank early today were foiled by the burglar alarm and fled without looting the strong box.

The attempt was made at four o'clock this morning. Five burglars entered through a plate glass window, smashed with stones.

After ransacking the drawers of
the desks they tackled the vault.
In the attempt the burglar alarm
was started.

The bank is half a mile from the police station. In five minutes Patrolman Kyle and Olchvary were on the scene. A posse was following. The burglars were captured as they fled from the bank.
They are held. The burglar alarm was still ringing five hours later,
awaiting the arrival of fingerprint
experts to take impressions before
the vault can be touched.

CHAIRMAN FERRY TO ATTEND CAMP

Will Be With Boy Scouts
at Catalina Island
July 20

Canceling a trip to New York,
Peter L. Ferry, chairman of the District Boy Scout camping committee, has made all arrangements
to attend the boy scout encampment on Catalina Island for the entire period of the camp. The camp will open on July 20 and close July 29. Mr. Ferry plans to take an active part in the work of the camp.

Tailman H. Trask, scout executive of the Pasadena council, has agreed to spend the first day in camp with the boys, and at the first campfire will tell the boys
of the camp traditions and the legends of the camp.

The camp is to be located at Howling's landing. An interesting legend surrounds this locality. It is said that in the olden days this landing and harbor was the rendezvous for some of the pirates
that infested the Pacific coast.
This section of the island was also used by the Indians as a burying ground. Scientists have recently opened several of these ancient graves and placed the contents in museums in various sections of the country.

The scouts will search for buried treasure on the island during the camp. This search will be conducted after dark. The boys will be assisted in their search by an old parchment, said to have been a map showing the location of the treasure. This map is said to have been lost by one of the most famous, or infamous, pirates that has ever sailed the Pacific ocean.

Another trip of interest that the scouts will take while at the island, will be over the old Chinese pirate ship, the "NingPo." This boat has been anchored in the bay
for several years and is one of the most interesting relics in the west of the days when free-booters roamed the seas. It is said that this boat was one of the largest of a Pacific ocean and was used by a Chinese pirate whose very name
struck terror to the hearts of residents in the seacoast towns.

While on the island the scouts
will be under the direction of able
adults. There will be an adult in charge of each tent. These leaders will form the executive council
of the camp.

According to the latest plans the
last meal in camp will be a mam-
moth watermelon feast.

CHICAGO LADIES' TEAM PLAYS GOOD BASEBALL

Hold Local Aggregation to a Score of Sixteen to Eleven

The game between the Glendale Merchants and the Chicago ladies' baseball club, was a cross between a track meet and a tea party. Glendale finally won by a 16 to 11 score. It was hard to tell whether the players or the spectators had the most fun out of the game.

Everytime one of the female Babe Ruths stepped to the plate some little joker in the crowd would advise Johnson, who was pitching for Glendale, "Let 'er hit it, yuh big stiff. Play nice." Johnson lobbied the mover as easy as possible, and still the fair women failed to connect with the horseshoe more than two or three times. The majority of the 11 runs scored by the visitors were chased in by the three male members of the team.

The only trouble the Merchants had during the entire game was forcing the players off first base when they secured a hit. Everyone of them worked like a tugboat to get to first base—when they arrived they died. There's a reason. The first baseman wasn't a man at all—it was a woman and she put the old Theda Bara on them when they arrived at her station.

A batsman would leave the plate going like a steam engine. He arrived at first base and Boss Cobb would almost have to chase him to second with a bat.

Occasionally one of the ladies would stick her bat in the way and a well would hit it. After a look of surprise she would trot down to first base. At one time there were two fair ones on the bases, and Catcher Finley for the visitors went to first on a bunt. When the next player came to bat, and Finley started, he had to keep his brakes set to keep from running over the girls.

Altogether it was a great game, and everyone had a good time. The only thing lacking was serving tea and cakes between innings.

The Merchants had good practice for the Sunday game. The ladies' club had some good practice and the fans had several good laughs.

HOUSEWARMING OF POSTOFFICE HELD

The housewarming and dance held Saturday night in the new postoffice on West Broadway, by employees of the Glendale office, was a success. Approximately 150 people were present. This affair was for postal employees and their families only.

The following committee had charge of all arrangements for the dance and refreshments: Mrs. H. C. Holcomb, C. S. Nicholson, Mrs. H. D. Ellis, H. Weger and E. J. Bielefeld.

Music for the dance was furnished by the Glendale postoffice orchestra under the direction of M. Kaufman. The other members of the orchestra are A. C. Holcomb, J. Boettner, E. C. McFarland and C. J. Donaldson.

One of the guests of honor was John R. Spence, superintendent of mails at the Los Angeles office. He was called on for an address. In his talk he praised the postoffice corps in Glendale and said that he knew they were efficient as they were all trained in Los Angeles.

Postmaster D. Ripley Jackson in a brief address, thanked the employees of the Glendale office for their continued loyalty and expressed the pleasure of the entire force in the knowledge that on next Saturday the office would move into the new location.

The liquid refreshments were donated by the Brown beverage company. The piano came from Salmacia brothers and the cakes were donated by the Stadler grocery.

CHRISTIANS HOLD LAST SERVICES

Rev. Snively Preaches the Closing Sermon in Old Edifice

Sunday was a great day at the Central Christian church, as the services held were the last in the old building. The morning sermon was preached by Rev. C. E. Snively of Lewiston, Ill., who is here to dedicate the new building. His text was on the line, "Out of the Old, into the New," and was very effective. Many of the congregation being moved to tears by his illustrations to the great effect of the memorial temples which are now being placed in all the new church buildings.

The communion service was postponed until the afternoon meeting, which convened at 2:30, and which was attended entirely by members of the church. Rev. Snively again preached, and his sermon was more on the lines of what was to be done during the coming week in the way of preparing for the dedication. He also spoke of the necessity of every member being on the job in furthering the plans for the great all-day services next Lord's day. After the close of his address several of the talks made by members of the church showed that they were alert to the tasks before them.

In the evening Rev. Cole, the pastor, preached on the theme, "Christianity's New Sunrise," taking for his text part of the verse of the Sixtieth Chapter of Isaiah: "Arise, Shine for the Glory of the Lord is Near." He spoke of the awful conditions brought on by the World war and the woeful decadence of Christian sentiment during the past year, then pointed out the hope of wonderful revival in true religious progress in the next few years. He repeated the statement again that there will be no precedence for the tasks in the new building. He also reiterated his prophecy that in the next ten years the Glendale Central Christian church would be supporting its own missionaries in every mission field where the disciples had outlined work; and that religious education in the new building would be undertaken in conjunction with the day schools. The singing was unusually enthusiastic, both that by the congregation and by the male quartet, Messrs. Gordon, Guy, Morris Eubanks and Forest Cole. Dr. Joseph Marple also contributed one number which was most beautifully rendered.

There is no question but that every grown-up who participated in the music memory contest conducted under the auspices of the Glendale Music club will long remember the fine enthusiasm of the several hundred school children who gathered for a final hearing of the masterpieces they had studied and made their own, and will agree that something wholesome and beautiful was put into their lives by that experience.

If the music clubs of other communities will adopt the construction policy of the Glendale Music club in admitting their potential citizens to the influence of their activities, the ideal of a musical America will soon be realized.

PRIMA DONNA TO HOLD SUMMER CLASSES HERE

Madame Felicia Romanowski, Pupil of Lamperti, to Give Instruction

Mme. Felicia Romanowska, pupil of the celebrated Maestro Francesco Lamperti, the world's famous Polish prima donna of the Italian grand opera and vocal teacher of note, will commence a summer course of instruction in the art of singing at her local studio, 405 West Windsor road, on July 1. Several pupils have already enrolled for this course and many more are expected to make application before the end of the month. As Mme. Romanowska will limit the number of pupils, it is, therefore, necessary to make application for enrollment as soon as possible. Mme. Romanowska is not only a great singer and vocal teacher, but is also an accomplished pianist and linguist, speaking fluently English, French Italian, Polish and German.

One meter a day was the previous record of the company to June 1.

MRS. WOODS CLASSES TO CLOSE SEASON

The evening ballroom dancing classes conducted by Mrs. Nanno Woods close this week for the summer months. Pupils of the Wednesday evening class will attend the Thursday evening class on June 29 for their last dancing lesson until the month of September. Mrs. Woods' dancing classes are held in her own beautiful home and partake of a wholesome, social nature which renders them a decided asset to the community. Newcomers to Glendale avail themselves gladly of this delightful way to become acquainted with congenial Glendale residents and several charming romances have already ensued as a result of these private dancing classes.

GLENDALE MUSIC CLUB DEVELOPS YOUNG TALENT

Influence Is Felt Among Youthful Musicians of the City

By MRS. DORA GIBSON

From the time of its organization, the Glendale Music club has exercised a strong influence on the young musicians of the community. In conducting their own meetings and appearing on their own programs the officers and members of the junior and juvenile auxiliaries have developed initiative and leadership and have experienced that joy of achievement which is an incentive to further effort.

The association of the junior auxiliary, with the activities of the parent club, linked it up with a big and vital movement, the fostering of a great art. Admission to the concerts of this organization gave the junior members an opportunity to acquire a standard of excellence by becoming familiar with masterpieces of music and by observing artistry of different types.

Those who would create or interpret received the vision and in inspiration which furnish the main spring of any worthy endeavor, and those who listen were given that which makes for finer and better living.

There is no question but that every grown-up who participated in the music memory contest conducted under the auspices of the Glendale Music club will long remember the fine enthusiasm of the several hundred school children who gathered for a final hearing of the masterpieces they had studied and made their own, and will agree that something wholesome and beautiful was put into their lives by that experience.

If the music clubs of other communities will adopt the construction policy of the Glendale Music club in admitting their potential citizens to the influence of their activities, the ideal of a musical America will soon be realized.

SCHOOL DAYS AT THE GLENDALE

Wesley Barry in "School Days," continues tonight at the Glendale Theatre with all its reminiscent flavor of other days, winning favor with the folks that remember the little red school house, and the pranks of yore.

In Wesley Barry, each in the audience sees himself, for Barry is youth, boyhood. And it is a long cry from the average movie drama back to the days of yore.

REX BEACH FILM AT THE T. D. & L.

Rex Beach's "Fair Lady," now at the T. D. & L. theatre, is an attraction that does credit to every one associated with its production and to the theatre presenting it. It is one hundred percent entertainment in beauty, heart-interest and thrills. It is lavishly staged, admirably acted by a splendid cast and the story is unfolded in clear-cut straight-from-the-shoulder fashion and finishes with a surprising, smashing climax.

Truths in Epigram

A nightingale dies for shame
if another bird sings better.—Burton (1576-1640).

THE UNEMPLOYED PROBLEM

From Chicago comes the report that there is a demand for labor. Men are needed for work on farms and railroads. Unless they may be obtained there must be large losses for lack of anybody to harvest the crops. At the same time able-bodied men are walking the streets in throngs refusing to accept jobs. They intimate that they would work for $10 a day. Thus is a new face put upon the problem of unemployment. A short time ago there were more men than jobs. Now jobs are plentiful but the men refuse to take them. It makes the problem even more serious. Industrial conditions, even when bad, in reasonable time are expected to change for the better. They have so changed. To change for the better the lazy, the idle and the shiftless, is far more difficult.

The man who won't work cumber the earth. His idea that the world owes him a living, and that the industry of others shall furnish him with bread and possibly pie, cannot bear the scrutiny of logic. He is a load that society is under no moral obligation to carry. And he should be made to toil, to earn his way. Most people have learned that they must work. Those of reasonable ambition desire to do their work well, in order to fit themselves for better tasks. It is not impossible that one may enjoy the performance of a useful task, take pride and pleasure in the perfection of his art as he strives.

When a man refuses to work, but elects to become a beggar, he deserves to be mustered into the public service. Then with tools in his hands and a keeper over him, he might be made of use. If the loafer loafs while a job awaits his coming, let him be driven to that job or another. The world owes him nothing that he is unwilling to earn.

"WHOM THE GODS WOULD DESTROY"

The familiar quotation "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad" befits the act of killing Sir Henry Wilson. With the commission of that senseless crime vanished sympathy for those who under cover of a plea of freeing Ireland inspired the act. No other effect could be possible. The murderers will be hanged with promptitude, and rightly served, but the cause they represented will be on the scaffold with them.

Nobody will deny that the efforts of the most turbulent faction of Ireland had found large support, much of it coming from this country. The general feeling was that Ireland had been wronged, that it would remain the seat of violence until the wrongs had been adjusted at least to the extent of granting independence. There were friendly councils in London. Ultimately there was an agreement. The world had hoped this meant peace but what it really did mean was renewal of a reign of terrorism and crime. With the British forces withdrawn, the native citizenry turned with zest to the activity of killing each other. It appeared as though each side was ready for a war of extermination.

How either side figured that by going to England and starting a series of murders, it could by any possibility gain anything but detestation, is something beyond the ordinary power of imagination. That the result must be disastrous to its hopes, seems so logical that there is no normal process by which another conclusion may be reached.

There still is hope for peace in Ireland, but apparently it is destined for the present to be a peace of repression. The clashing elements may cease to clash, but only because restrained by the presence of an element more potent.

SAVAGERY UNLOOSE

Sometimes people, serene in the belief that they belong to civilization, receive a sudden shock. They are reminded that civilization is but the cloak of savagery. They are appalled when under stress of passion, the cloak is removed and the truth stands revealed. The banded murderers in the Illinois coal strike have given them the latest shock of this type. Descriptions of the conduct of the assassins recall the horrors of a Russian pogrom. Not only were unarmed men butchered, but the dying were taunted and the dead dishonored. Regardless of the rights or wrongs of the original dispute that led to so ghastly a climax, no word is to be uttered in defense of the wanton brutality. Should the state fail immediately to apprehend and punish the guilty, it would be branded with an indelible mark of shame.

There is small consolation in the thought that most of the murderers are ignorant foreigners. They are not in a land now in which ignorant foreigners are supposed to dominate. If they have been permitted to assume an authority defiant of all law, and openly to commit crimes showing a raging, hideous depravity, the duly constituted authorities are at fault. They have been unforgivably lax. If they withhold their hands now from seizure of the criminals, they still will be lax. But whatever they do, the deeds have been perpetrated, the dark disgrace put upon the whole land.

Only madmen voluntarily could have taken the course of these strikers. Perhaps they were urged on by cunning agitators employed to injure the strikers. Such things have happened. If they had a good cause they have destroyed the last vestige of sympathy for it, and the cause is lost. Organized bands that operate for evil are not to be tolerated. The question is broader than any question of mere labor. It ceases to be a question of labor at all. It involves the proposition that law and order must be made to prevail, or civilization drop pretense of functioning, and withdraw in favor of chaos.

AN HONOR DESERVED

Naturally the appointment of Dr. George Ellery Hale as member of a distinguished educational body is received in southern California with a feeling of local pride. This is because the renowned astronomer has been so thoroughly identified with scientific investigation at the Mt. Wilson observatory. Yet in a broader sense Dr. Hale does not belong to a community, nor even to this country. He is a citizen of the world of intellect. The results of his studies affect the whole realm of knowledge.

The committee of which he has been made the twelfth member, completing the list, has no other American. It included such admitted leaders in science, philosophy or letters, as Albert Einstein, Madame Curie, Henri Bergson and Gilbert Murray. Most of these are practical and deeply learned investigators of material truth. All in some field of advanced scholarship have achieved fame. Americans are glad to be represented among them by a man so worthy of the honor as Dr. Hale.

The duty of this committee is to study and advocate methods of improving intellectual and scientific conditions among the nations. The appointment was made by the governing board of the League of Nations. The task before the committee calls for the highest grade of cultured mentality. The first meeting is to be held in Geneva in July. The plans there formed will be of great importance. Few committees named for any purpose could equal this body in attainment and erudition.

Sex and Common Sense

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Miss A. Maude Royden is the assistant preacher at the City Temple, London.

She is the only woman mentioned among the high religious lights in the volume "Painted Windows," the last interesting production of "The Gentleman With The Duster."

She has just published a book in New York and London entitled "Sex and Common Sense." The book, curiously enough, contains reading matter which justifies the title.

There is no subject upon which every human being needs to use all the intelligence he has or can borrow comparable to the question of sex.

The instinct which leads us to avoid the topic is doubtless a decent one. But like every other instinct it can be carried too far and do precisely the harm it intends to avoid.

Most books on this topic pay too much attention to perversions and depravities and not enough to normality.

"Ordinary men and women," says Miss Royden, "want first to know how to live ordinary human lives on a higher level and after a nobler pattern than before, and we believe the first essential is to realize that the sex problem, as it is called, is the problem of something noble, not something base. The sex instinct is not 'the Fall of Man,' neither is it an instance of divine wisdom on which moralists could, if they had only been consulted in time, greatly have improved. It is a thing noble in essence. It is the development of the higher, not the lower creation."

The book keeps this tone up right through and is a sound and wholesome effort to treat this problem, not as some dreadful mumbo-jumbo heathen taboo, but as a great and determining factor of life.

In this matter knowledge may have slain its thousands, but ignorance has certainly slain its tens of thousands. Some day or other we must outlive the notion that ignorance has anything to do with holiness and must get to the point where we see that there can be no sacredness, that is really sacred, that does not rest upon facts. The sex problem is inescapable. It cannot be banished. And the only way to make it a sweet and helpful asset to life is intelligently to idealize it and make it the companion of beauty and loyalty and of reverence.

As J. Arthur Thomson says, "It is notably difficult to speak wisely about sex and the better counsel is often silence, but Miss Maude Royden's book is the exception that proves the rule. She has spoken with wisdom and without fear."

THE RIGHT WORD

A CONTRIBUTION

(Find the error in this article.)

You can bank on the fact that the incident described below is only one of many similar occurrences.

Jacob Blass: "I am a member of a small organization devoted to the study of Franklin's Jumbo, to the discussion of various topics of general educational interest. It was only natural that an interestingly instructive column as 'The Right Word' should recommend itself to the attention of this club, who read and discuss the daily instalments at their meetings."

One evening a controversy arose over the vocabulary section in the column. A majority contended that a certain word in that section was entirely too uncommon to be worthy of study. I was one of those who maintained that it would be worth the time to memorize the definition.

"The following day I read an editorial in an afternoon paper and much to my surprise found the same word there I had learned the evening before. I may say with assurance that, were it not for the fact I had seen the word in your column, I would have been ignorant of the purport of the sentence and would probably have lost the sense of the whole editorial. This incident proved to me that through your column I had learned the truly 'right word'."

Yesterday's Error

"The second error, therefore, is not different than that made by many speakers and writers."

The right word is from; as, the second error is not different from that made by many speakers and writers. Do not say different than.

THE LISTENING POST

Here before us are rows of keys.
On the typewriting machine.
Waiting the touch of fingers.
And here are nimble fingers waiting impulse.

And here is impulse awaiting the thing that is back of it all.
Which is the thought.

The thought stirs.
And then follows the impulse to declare it.
Set it down and pass it along.
And the impulse obedient to the thought agitates the nimble fingers.
And the fingers touch the keys.
And the keys rise and fall and set something down on paper.

It may be a letter.
An essay.
A poem or an editorial article or a review or anything at all.
But back of it all is the thought.
The spark of the Divinity that is in us.

Here is a man, for instance.
Eating and drinking and wearing clothes and working.

At whatever task may be his.
And parts of him operate like the machine.
Fingers and hands and muscles and vocal chords and eyes and lips and heart and the like.

Just as the keys on the typewriter.
All awaiting impulse.
And impulse awaiting will.
Which is the thing back of it all.
The thing that inspires and directs and moves the fingers and hands and muscles.

Here is the soil.
And back of that is the seed.

And back of that is the farmer.
And back of it all Nature.
The impulse that lives in the seed and that makes the soil fertile and that bursts the shell and sends the shoot through the earth.
Until the harvest is gained.

Or here is a people.
Like the keys on the machine.
Or the seed and soil.
Awaiting the impulse.
Thought and ideal and will.
And as the thought and ideal and will may be, so is the nation great or shameful.

And we may bring the thing down to the individual.
The deft fingers that serve are the same deft fingers that pick a lock or take a life.
Depending on the thing back of them.
Thought.
Ideal.
Will.

So the keys of the machine may set down marvelous inspiration.
Or they may write vulgar and erotic nastiness.
The keys of the machine are impersonal.
Mechanical.
They merely move toward the end of the thought back of them.

And so with you and me.
It is the thought and the ideal and the will that count.
These are the directing forces.
That touch the keys.
Set down the thought.
Make the life.

SONGS OF THE POETS

The Spring of the Year.—By Allan Cunningham (1784-1842)

Gone were but the winter cold,
And gone were but the snow,
I could sleep in the wild woods
Where primroses blow.

Cold's the snow at my head
And cold at my feet:

And the finger of death's at my e'en,
Closing them to sleep.

Let none tell my father
Or my mother so dear—
I'll meet them both in heaven
At the spring of the year.

THE HUMANIZING OF KNOWLEDGE

PART I

Modern scientific research in spite of its professed aloofness and disregard of human feelings and motives, has succeeded in unfolding to our gaze so new a world in its origin, development, workings and possibilities of control in the interests of human welfare that practically all of the older poetic and religious ideas have to be fundamentally revised or reinterpreted.

Scientific knowledge ingeniously applied and utilized by inventors and engineers has, with the assistance of business men and financiers, metamorphosed our environment and our relations with our fellow men.

Our notions of our own nature are being so altered that should we discreetly apply our increasing knowledge of the workings of the mind and the feelings a far more successful technique might finally emerge for the regulation of the emotions than any that has hitherto been suggested.

This is at least an exhilarating hope. We are forced to ask whether it is safe when our life has come to be so profoundly affected by and dependent on scientific knowledge to permit the great mass of mankind and their leaders and teachers to continue to operate on the basis of pre-superstitions and prejudices which owe their respectability and currency to their great age and uncritical character, but which fail to correspond with real things and actual operations as they are coming to be understood.

Much has been written of the conflict of science and religion. The real problem is nothing less than the stupendous task of cultivating an appreciation of the nature and significance of precise thought and exact knowledge in a being by nature and nurture so careless of truth and given to modes of thinking repugnant to scientific intelligence. For even the more magnificent scientific discoveries, especially those of recent years, have not penetrated into our general education and are entirely disregarded in most discussions of social problems. And yet an imposing accumulation of critical information of wide bearing is at our disposal which could become an active factor in the readjustment of the troubled relations of men were it possible to overcome the obstacles to its general dissemination and acceptance.

A striking illustration of the present ineffective methods of popularizing cardinal scientific discoveries has recently been supplied by the revival of a strong and threatening opposition to the knowledge we now have of man's affinity and obvious relationships with the rest of the organic world. The idea of organic evolution is perhaps the most momentous in its bearings of all the great generalizations which have come with increased knowledge of the globe's history and the history of its inhabitants. Those who will take the trouble to consider even in the most elementary manner the multifold and concurrent evidence of the successive appearance of vegetable and animal species on the earth and the reasons for including man among the primates, cannot fail, unless they be utterly blinded by prejudice, freely to concede the animalhood of man.

Recently a serious misunderstanding has resulted from the report that men of science are giving up "Dar-

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

So many persons who never have given an actual thought to the subject of crime, choose it as a theme for lengthy preachments, that confusion is being created in the public mind.

Crimes of a violent nature seem to prevail as never before. They prevail most in regions where punishment is withheld, or administered with gentleness, the sting of the wound soothed by judicial tears, and prospects of parole.

It is a sure thing that a cold-blooded murderer never needs to be hanged but once. There is an apparently well founded opinion that if the thugs now roaming the highway were in prison, the highways would be safer places. Just at this time one paper begins publication of a series of frenzied piffle showing that capital punishment is murder. Generally, however, it is visited upon the innocent.

Then appears the plea for the abolition of prisons altogether. The thief may steal your coat, the assassin brain you with a club, but its only a way they have. Human peculiarities must be considered.

Of course there runs through all this, the central idea that the only truly noble soul is that of the criminal, and the only wrong in life is that people object to being robbed and murdered, and will persist in annoying the favored individuals who take an innocent joy in doing these things.

Two persons struck by a Los Angeles cab have been given damages of $17,730. The meter of the offending vehicle will have to buzz pretty lively to make the deficit good. There would be fewer such accidents if in every case they cost the culpable real money.

Last month a rich man back east shot another man. He did not deny the act, but ascribed it to an attempt at blackmail. By this he got some sympathy, and was allowed bail.

Developments tend to show that blackmail may be a poor excuse, the belief being that it was so in the present instance. Anyhow, the slayer has been put back in a cell and informed that he will stay there until tried for murder.

Two Japanese have been fined $50 each for shipping green melons out of Imperial valley. This hardly seems to fit the crime. No purchaser of a green melon could be satisfied with a less penalty than that the seller be obliged to eat it.

WATCHING THE PARADE

By JOHN PILGRIM

Maybe I'm getting harsh as I grow old, but I swear that the more I see of parents the less I like 'em. A fat-headed, conceited, overbearing, quarrelsome lot. Assuming to dictate the life, love and works of their sons and daughters, although a scrutiny of their own history would in most cases disprove their ability to conduct a fish stand.

Enter John, Anna and Jimmie Smith. John is worth $250,000 and has permitted that fact to fool him into the belief that he is a clever, masterful, extraordinarily wise man. Anna used to do her own cooking and crawl around on her own kitchen floor with her own scrub rag in her own right hand. But that $250,000 has fooled her, too. Somehow—and how she can hold the belief after one good look in the glass heaven only knows—somehow Anna has persuaded herself that she grades as an aristocrat. It is hard for me to get at just what she does think of herself, except that it is too much.

She rarely goes anywhere, except to the theater or to the movies. She is a dear, good, honest wife and mother and a damnably stupid woman, and her conversation can only be set forth as terrible. Divert her from her cook, her automobile, her diet, her latest gaud and the lives and deaths of her relatives and she is sunk. She has no other word to say. On any other topic she could not hold the attention of a parrot. John got rich through an accident in business. He is as contented with Anna as a mate today—when he is rich—as he was when both were young and poor. Which is a cruel indictment of John's intellectual capacity.

Cue for Jimmy. Bright lights and loud clashes from the orchestra as the young hero enters. Jimmie is worth eight or ten of his parents. He has the advantage of an education, which they did not have, and association with intelligent people, which they never did, and of the broadening influence of the war and service abroad. Jimmie is a sort of a freak. His good looks and bright candor and keen mind cannot be accounted for by any theory of heredity. Mendel would throw up his hands if he were confronted by John and Anna and Jimmie.

Well, John and Anna, thick, fat, stupid, good, honest, rich, uninteresting, low-grade, mental twenty per cents, have disinherited Jimmie because he married the girl he loves. I know nothing about her, but I'll take Jimmie's judgment against that of John and Anna any time.

That's why I say I'm against most parents. The more I see of parents the more firmly I believe that their sons and daughters are wiser, saner, kinder, broader than their forebears.

Not to refer unkindly to their comparative good looks. Rave on, parents, rave on!

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

By DELLA E. STEWART

We just can't have everything. Either we have a good appetite and not much to satisfy it with, or else we have all the rich fare that could be desired and no digestion. We mourn because we have no children, some of us, and others complain because their quiver is full. Either we have work and don't want it, or want it and can't get it. Up and down, up and down swings life's pendulum, with most of us. Queer, isn't it, how much more we think of the downs than we do of the ups?

Life, if it means anything beyond mere existence to us, must mean a constant striving to realize the relative importance of all that comes into it, and, further, the striving to eliminate, not trouble, but the state of mind which leads up to clinging to resentment and undue foreboding and grief.

Quite a large contract that? It surely is. That's what makes life so wonderful. We'd all feel very much flattered if some business associate or friend came to us, saying: "Now, here's a very difficult undertaking. I am going to ask you to undertake it, for I know that you can carry it through successfully—you, and no one else." How our chests would puff out at the thought that we were considered so competent! And how we would work and plan to make good our friend's opinion of us!

But when life gives us a big job we whine and fall down with a miserable "I never can!" Or, don't we? If we do, we're foolishly weak, are we not? What we need is not self-pity, but a new backbone!

DO YOU KNOW THAT?

Two Family Dwelling of Interesting Type

The two-family type of dwelling appeals to many home-builders, for the revenue derived from rental makes paying for a home, a most attractive investment proposition.

In the house plan, as designed by this architect, the kitchen and dining-room are combined, thus allowing an extra large area for the living-room in front.

The arrangement of the interior can easily be altered to suit your particular needs. If you like the general appearance and style of this dwelling, you can use it conveniently as a basis of discussion with your builder. You will find that the situation now is highly favorable to those intending home construction.

COLORADO ZONED FOR BUSINESS IN EAGLE ROCK

Cheers and Hisses Mark Hearing Before City Trustees

Amid cheers from some and hisses from others, the zoning ordinance creating Colorado boulevard, a business district, was passed by the board of trustees of Eagle Rock at its meeting last night.

It was a packed house that greeted the trustees—not even standing room was left. The meeting was opened by Mr. Osborne, president of the board, who stated that after careful consideration of the petitions and protests received, the original ordinance had been redrawn, and he proceeded to read the ordinance as redrafted.

At the conclusion of the reading opportunity was offered the property owners present to voice their opinion of the ordinance. There was a heated discussion as to the legality of zoning ordinances in general, and the city attorney was called upon for his opinion in the matter. The question was raised as to the advisability of zoning the city at its present stage of growth, and the attendant revision of the fire ordinance and the effect it would have upon the class of building already erected within the district, was discussed.

The feeling was so strong, either for or against the proposed ordinance by property owners, that several times the suggestion was made that the idea of zoning Eagle Rock City be abandoned entirely and that it go along as it has in the past. Finally it was put to the vote of those present, and a majority appeared in favor of the zoning. When the ordinance was submitted to the board it was passed, four in favor, and one against.

There were a number of other matters taken up by the board, particularly the obligation of the city to supply new territory with water. An opinion by the city attorney was read and filed, and he is to give the matter further consideration. The city attorney asked for additional compensation, or the privilege of calling in outside help in the matter, as he is being obliged to give up a large part of his time investigating the questions of law involved. An application was filed for water in one of the new hill tracts, but it was denied on the ground that the city could not be compelled to furnish water when it might endanger the present water supply. The board will consider the advisability of making a test case of it, as there seems to be no limit to the number of applications for water. Mr. Bullard appeared before the trustees in regard to water-proofing aseptic tanks, and he was instructed to take the matter up with the city engineer.

PRESBYTERIANS PICNIC
The Presbyterian Sunday school held its annual picnic at Brookside park on Saturday. About 400 attended, leaving Eagle Rock City at 9:30. A picnic luncheon was enjoyed, and the Sunday school provided ice cream for all. There were games in the afternoon for all ages, baseball, cricket, tennis, volley ball and swimming.

CHESTER S. PROUT OPENS WORK AT EAGLE ROCK

Begins With Discourse Upon Bible As Most Popular Work

"The Bible is the most popular book in the world as evidenced by the wide circulation of millions of copies, and still it is a book which has been refuted, demolished, overthrown and exploded more times than any other book. Of course, some worldly wise student starts up to upset it, but it seems like a large solid cube of granite, it is right, side up, and when you overturn it again it is still right side up. In less than a hundred years, said Voltaire, it will have been swept from existence, but think of the millions of copies sold. People are hungry for the bread of life today."

These were the opening remarks yesterday of Evangelist Chester S. Prout at the Gospel tabernacle, Eagle Rock, as he introduced the interesting theme of "Wonderful Discoveries of Archaeology and Bible Inspiration." The Gospel tabernacle was packed, and the interest throughout gave evidence that the evangelist had captured his audience.

The speaker showed many interesting views of recent excavations of ruins in Bible lands and many rescued tablets. In part he said: "In surveying the whole sweep of discoveries in the historical line, one may well be amazed at the galaxy of characters now drawn up to view. Beginning at the Fourteenth Chapter of Genesis we find evidence of the existence of the leaders Chedorlaomer, of the great Elamite campaign against the cities of the plain."

The probabilities of a Hyksos domination in Egypt when Abraham and Joseph reached the Nileland are increasing with each new discovery touching that period. The possession at Gizeh museum of the mummy of the Pharaoh of the oppression, Rameses II, and the tablet of the time of Meneptha II, bearing the name of 'Israel in Egypt,' Sennecherib's records are full of facts regarding his illustrious campaign of 701 B. C., where we find Hezekiah mentioned the name, the siege of Lachish pictured on his walls and the amount of tribute paid the invader.

"By the Code of Hammurabi and the Tell-el Armana tablets and the possibility of deciphering them from Sir Henry Rawlinson's discovery of the famous Behistun tablets, we have been able to absolutely refute Bible critics' charge of the ignorance existing in Abraham's day."

"As a result of uncovering the ruins of Ninevah, the city of ancient Lachish and many other ruins scientists have more than cleared the accuracy of Bible records and the mouths of Bible skeptics are stopped."

The evangelist emphatically declared that the Bible was never written for a text book of science but it was penned to lead men to the God of Science. And yet, when it addresses itself to a subject of scientific concern, it should essentially speak the truth, if it makes the claim of inspiration. And this it most assuredly does. This evening the speaker promised a very interesting address on "The Challenge of the Gospel to an Age of Reconstruction."

THE STRAIN WAS TOO GREAT
"A newspaper paragrapher was carried off to a sanitarium the other day a complete wreck. 'Overwork!'"

"You might call it that. He made a solemn vow to go a week without writing a paragraph about Lloyd George, Lenin and Trotsky, or any one of the reigning movie stars. At the end of the fourth day he broke down and wept like a child."

SOVIET SATISFIED WITH GERMAN TREATY

Point Was Psychological; Russia Did Not Expect Much Results

LONDON, June 27. — Russia's trade agreement with Germany, the sensation of the Genoa conference, has already served its purpose, according to Soviet officials here.

"From our standpoint, the purpose of the agreement was purely psychological," it was stated to the United Press. "We do not expect to derive much material benefit from it."

"We saw what effect the agreement would have. It warned the allies that it might be a mistake to ignore two powerful companions in misery. "As to the lasting benefits to Russia from the agreement, it is hard to find them. There are no military clauses. As to the trade clauses, Germany is under the thumbs of the allies. She must do what they want; and they do not want her to obtain the main benefit from the resumption of trade with Russia."

"Poland also is a barrier. It is easy to say Germany and Russia are neighbors; it is easy also from an examination of the map to see the sort of barrier that the allies erected between them in Poland; a nation that lives solely by her French inspired hatred of her neighbors."

"We think, too, that it will be found the agreement itself does not imply very much. Its main feature is the mutual renunciation of reparations for war damages. It would have been a spectacle to see the allies trying to force Germany and Russia to pay each other reparations, as from their horror at the conclusion of the agreement one would have thought they intended to do."

"As to restoring Germany's pre-war trade in Russia, we do not want to restore it entirely. The 1904 trade agreement was fine for Germany, but disadvantageous to us. Germany had virtual monopolies in certain markets. In future we hope to manufacture for ourselves many of the things that Germany sent to us."

From both Berlin and Moscow sources, however, reports continue to come of the establishment of companies which will take German capital into Russia.

The Moscow wireless announces that Professor Krut, a Soviet electrical expert, has returned from Berlin. He reported to the state economic planning commission that he attended meetings of the leading German electrical manufacturers. They consider it important to establish Russian electrical technical offices to organize the repair and supply of electrical stations and public utility services, he said. They further proposed to organize the production of machinery and appliances.

Following the report, the state electrical section decided to determine in what branches the participation of German electrical industry and capital would be desirable. The section suggested transferring the negotiations with German electrical firms to Moscow.

From Berlin it is announced that a Russo-German company has been floated, with headquarters at Moscow and a capital of thirty million marks, to exploit Russian industrial resources. Shareholders on the German side, it is declared, include the Stinnes, Krupp and Electrical trust interests, while the Soviet government holds the Russian shares.

Officials in London believe that the treaty will be of real value to both countries. They believe that at least German capital will penetrate Russia, and that German industrialists will get a running start in helping to rebuild Russian industry.

STRATEGY
"Stiddy there, lion; take it aisy," quavered the Irish zoo attendant in his most soothing and ingratiating tones, as the transfer of a wild beast from one cage to another was being effected.
"What's the idea?" queried a comrade. "Callin' that hyena a lion?"
"Have ye no tact? Can't ye see 'tis flatterin' him I am."

The Barton Bedtime Stories

BUT WORK CAN'T CURE FOOLISHNESS

By JOHN BARTON

(Copyright, 1921, by Associated Newspapers)

I won't say Frisk Squirrel enjoyed doing all the work his Uncle Tad Coon laid out for him, but he did enjoy the feeling of pride when he got it done. And they had a glorious frog hunt to celebrate. Earning your living wasn't so very hard when Tad was along. "We won't do this every day," Tad explained. "Tisn't good for your fur to go skipping around in the hot sun. And children should get plenty of sleep. Day's the time for sleeping. Now you curl up like a good little, fluffy-tail, so you'll feel brisk and lively for this evening."

He wouldn't tell where they were going to go, and Frisk was so curious he could scarcely settle down for wondering. Twice the little rascal put his nose out of his nest to beg, "Please, Uncle Tad, please give me a hint, so my head'll stop flunking. Please—ease." But Uncle Tad only answered with a snore. (That's the best way in the world to stop little folks from whining.) And before he knew it, Frisk was snoring, too.

It was nearly dusk when he heard Tad calling: "Hustle up, fluffy-tail! Come along!" Then wasn't he glad he'd gotten all cleaned up before he went to sleep. Just a lick apiece to make his hair and his whiskers lie down, and he was out of his hole, looking as tidy as anyone.

All the Woodsfolk were out by Doctor Muskrat's flat stone. And they looked him over carefully as he met them. Only Tad didn't seem to be paying any attention to him. If he tried any of his smart tricks he'd have found out quick enough that Tad was, too. But he had his Sunday manners on. He even remembered to ask Doctor Muskrat's permission to live at the Pond.

Of course Frisk was good. Half because he was awfully shy, half because he was afraid Tad would go off on his trip without him. So he had to behave as the big folks did. He carried his nose pretty high in the air as they left the Pond. He was so busy with his own conceit that he didn't look where they were going. Once he stopped to squint up at the branches of a thorn, and fell a little way behind; so he didn't notice how Tad walked around the stone-pile at the head of the lane.

And They Had a Glorious Frog Hunt to Celebrate

You know any more than to spoil some other fellow's hunting? He caught the fluffy-tail's furry collar, and shook all the conceit out of him.

NEXT STORY—YOU COULDN'T STAY CROSS WITH FRISK.

UNITY LODGE OF GLENDALE EATS

Unity lodge of Glendale was host Saturday at one of the most elaborate outdoor feasts of the season—a great big beefsteak feed, which was held at Verdugo Woodlands. Two hundred and fifty Masons of the valley were present. The event was one riot of fun. The afternoon was spent in sports of various kinds, principal among which were the baseball games. At 6 o'clock the dinner bell was rung and the way those Masons lined up for the feed.

When they finished there were only a few steaks left in town. Long after dark Masons were seen wending their way toward Glendale. They carried with them that well-known satisfied expression.

THE JOY IN THE HEAVENS OVER ONE SINNER

Rev. Preston Discourses at Pacific Ave. Methodist Church

The Rev. Harley G. Preston preached yesterday at the Pacific Avenue Methodist church from the text: "Likewise I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." Luke 15:10.

He spoke in part: "The trouble with the Jews was that being 'the chosen people' they were extraordinarily proud of it; so proud that they were unwilling that others should come crowding in. This was mainly why they rejected the Messianic claims of Jesus. He was going about the country proclaiming that God was no respecter of persons and offering salvation to Jews and Gentiles on equal terms."

A meeting of the Sanhedrin was called to see what should be done about it. There were other accusations against Jesus, but chiefly this, "that he was the friend of publicans and sinners." He preached as one of the people and the "common people heard him gladly." He had gathered about him a body-guard of twelve persons of no social or ecclesiastical standing whatever, mere members of the working class. "I have heard," said one of the rabbis in the meeting, "that recently, while dining with a publican, he said, 'This day is salvation come to this house.' 'It is reported,' said another, 'that he was seen conversing with a woman of the town at the village well of Sychar, and at high noon.' 'I was present,' said another, 'when he permitted a woman of like character to anoint his feet with precious ointment and said to her, 'Go in peace; thy sins be forgiven thee.'"

The feast of dedication was just over, and Jesus was preaching in Perea, east of the Jordan. His congregation was a singular one. "All the publicans and sinners were drawing near unto him to hear him."

The delegation of the Sanhedrin stood and listened while he told of a woman who, having lost a coin, searched in every nook and cranny until she found it, and then called together her friends and neighbors, saying, 'Rejoice with me, for I have found the lost!'

They heard him tell of a shepherd who went out into the mountains after a lost sheep and sought until he found it; and when he had brought it home upon his shoulders he called together his friends and neighbors, saying, 'Rejoice with me, for I have found the lost!'

They heard him tell of a father whose younger son had gone into a far country and wasted his substance with riotous living; and when the son returned in poverty and rags he was received by his father with joy, who called in his friends and neighbors, saying, 'Let us eat and be merry; for this my son was dead and is alive again; he was lost and is found!'

This was the setting of the sermon; and its conclusion was, "Likewise I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."

Everybody wants to know about God; but where shall we find him? Job set out upon the quest, saying, "O that I knew where I might find him! I would order my course before him and understand what he would say unto me. Behold I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him; on the left hand where he works, but I cannot behold him; he hideth himself on the right hand, that I cannot see him." And Job never did find God until he found him at the cross with a glad cry, "I know that my Redeemer liveth; whom I shall see for myself with these eyes!" Job 19:25-27.

It is recorded that once when Jesus was speaking of God as our Father, his disciple Philip said, "Lord, show us the Father and it sufficeth us." Jesus saith unto him, "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip? He that hath seen me hath seen the Father; how sayest thou then, show us the Father? Believest thou not that I am in the Father and the Father in me?" If this means anything it means that if we shall never see God or know him except as we see and know him in the person of his only begotten and well-beloved Son.

We want to know about heaven as well as about God. Such information must be largely given in figures of speech because of a lack of human vocabulary adequate to the full expression of spiritual truth.

But there is no portrayal of heaven that so appeals to homesick pilgrims as that of Jesus: "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so I would have told you; I go to prepare a place for you." "Home, sweet home!"

It is little we know of the angels, but we know as much as need be. One thing is clear: They are deeply concerned in the affairs of this world of ours. At its creation they shouted for joy. At the incarnation they sang, "Glory to God in the highest, peace on earth and good-will to men!" His sepulchre was encompassed by legions of them, one of whom (happy angel) rolled away the stone. And when he ascended from Olivet they thronged his chariot and bore him aloft to the glory which he had with the Father before the world was.

The doctrine of guardian angels is not mentioned much nowadays; but it is a great truth and comfort to those who rightly hold it. Mothers are right when they sing, "Hush, my babe, lie still and slumber; holy angels guard thy bed."

The teaching of the Scriptures is plain: "He shall give his angels charge over thee; and they shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou dash thy foot against a stone."

It was an angel that directed Hagar and her famishing child to spring of water. It was a troop of angels that thronged the ladder which Jacob saw on the heights of Bethel. It was an angel that went before Israel in the wilderness to point the way. It was another that came to Peter in prison and set him free.

There is rejoicing among the angels over all who return from sin. They sit as honored guests at the great jubilee. "The tears of penitents," says Bernard, "are the wine of angels." Here is a blessed truth which brings heaven near. We have more servants to wait upon us, says Geo. Herbert, "than we are willing to take note of."

But above everything else we want to know about our heavenly friends who have passed on to us. Where are they? Dead? No, living right on! "As for the dead, they are asleep in the arms of the Lord." The several vessels of the church, tossed, shall safely in the harbor of heaven. There is nowhere a more evidence to show that the angels are so near to us as in the home of the Christian household. It is the angels who are neither marrying nor being married in marriage in heaven; the earthly occasion for their passing is the spiritual aspect of marriage. All considerations that death can only deepen and sweeten it. Not only so; the children of Christian parents are so included in the covenant, that the conditions be met, not one can possibly be left out. The covenant is a yea and amen; "I will be a God to you and to your children after you." They may wander off like the prodigal but, drawn by the cords of parental prayer, they will surely in due time return like him.

Why should we not enjoy a bit of heaven here and now? There may be some young man listening to me who left his country home a few years ago and caught up in the hurly-burly of the great city, has been swept away from the moorings of his home, or possibly a young woman who, under stress of circumstance, has been so engaged in the world's work as to forget her earthly home with Christ; or possibly someone who has passed the term of life, in tending all the time to heed the call to repentance, but never doing it.

There's a great doubt about being able to get messages to Mars, and whether there is anyone there to get it if we could, but to the human there is no doubt about our being inhabited and we can send a wireless to the waiting angels in heaven just now? I know a message that would reach the hearts of multitudes and strike a new and beautiful note in the celestial song book is:

"Come and go unto my Father."

DR. BOYER TELLS OF VIENNA LIFE IN LETTER

Captain Watson Receives Communication From Glendale Physician

The following is a copy of a very interesting letter received by Capt. T. D. Watson from Dr. Boyer, who is taking a post-graduate course in medicine at Vienna, Austria:

Vienna, Austria, June 8, 1922.
Capt. Thomas Watson, Glendale, Calif.
Dear Captain Watson: We had a very interesting and pleasant journey, both Mrs. Boyer and myself were well enough to enjoy every hour of it.

Vienna is a very beautiful city, in fact, claimed to be the prettiest city on the continent, with many beautiful parks, both in the city and near suburbs. Magnificent public buildings, churches, theaters and hospitals all have been supported at least in part by the government. The Viennese people are great lovers of good music and theatrical amusements, and due to the government support the prices of admission to the operas and theaters have been very reasonable, even to the best entertainments, so that the very poor could go and enjoy them.

The hospitals also are supported by the government and are all filled with patients. I have been more than surprised at the wonderful post-graduate medical school they have organized here. It is better now than it was before the war. The very best of expert professors are devoting their time to teaching. The people are too poor here to consult these specialists in their private office so go to the public hospitals, where the professors see them and let their classes see them at the same time. In that way they get good care and the professors make a living by being paid by the doctors. There is no place on the globe where such wonderful learning is offered as here at present. There are over 100 American doctors here now studying, four from California. The last of this month there are 30 coming a bunch from Philadelphia. We find the Austrians very nice to Americans, apparently holding no war grudge against us. Many express wishes that the United States would take them as a colony.

It is impossible for Austria to exist as a nation as it is now. They have 6,000,000 people and practically no natural resources. No coal, oil and very little timber or farming land. Their cattle have been taken from them and it is impossible to get any fresh milk or cream without a special permit showing it is for a sick person or a baby. Practically everything they eat or use for manufacture, the raw material, must be imported. The money is practically valueless, having depreciated to one three-thousandths (1/3000) of what it was worth before the war. So a person who was worth $15,000 before the war, now is worth $5. One can hardly appreciate such a depreciation. People who were wealthy now are suffering for food. The cost of living is going up every day, bread, butter, sugar and many other articles of diet cost as much here as in Glendale, and the average man's wages is about 30 cents a day. How far would 30 cents go in Glendale for a family of four or five?

It is certainly impossible for them to continue but for a short time. The Austrians are an easy-going, happy-go-lucky class of people, they would have rebelled long before now. All are sorry they were ever led into the war by German promises, promising them everything, and now they hate each other like cats and dogs and say that if we had lost the war Germany would have made it worse for us than we have done for them.

Living expenses have more than doubled since we arrived here and am told they are about four times what they were a year ago and about the same with ordinary merchandise. It is no more the cheap place it was to live and buy, especially leather, onyx, tortoise shell, etc., it was before a year ago. I am glad to learn big things are being planned for Glendale. Mr. Boyer and I will appreciate Glendale more than ever before when we get back in August.

With best wishes,
Yours sincerely,
(Signed) DR. BOYER.

When Emperor Augustus Died in 14 A. D. the population of the world was about 54,000,000, against approximately 1,703,000,000 in 1920.

PISCOPALIANS CALLED TO MEET

Retirement of Rev. Cornell and Calling of Permanent Pastor

Parish meeting of the members of St. Mark's Episcopal church has been called for this evening, to consider the question of calling a permanent pastor, as the retirement of the Rev. J. H. Cornell, of Pasadena, who has been supplying at the church for more than a year.

Rev. Cornell, who endeared himself to the congregation, because of his years, has withdrawn from the church. The church is now free of debt. It is felt by the congregation that it is enough pledges were secured for the congregation, as the building of a rectory as well as calling of a pastor.

POET POSTMASTER IS NEW TITLE OF MR. JACKSON

Wins First Prize at Progressive Club Spring Rhyme-fest

D. Ripley Jackson, 39 prize poet of Glendale, according to the award last night at the Progressive club spring poets' dinner. George Thomas is second best spring poet, and the booby prize was won by A. Gelmor.

The committee members of the club awarding the prizes were fined $5 each for the award, under the complaints of the also-rhyming members, so everybody was satisfied. Postmaster Jackson was one of the committee members. Afterward he changed the title of his verse to "Pretty Expensive Poetry."

A spring chicken dinner marked the spring poets' night in the auditorium of the chamber of commerce. It proved to be one of the big events of the year. Thirty-five members of the organization turned out to do their little bit in the way of poetry, and each had the "poetical time of his life." The members were accompanied by their wives, sweethearts and friends, who looked on the melee in sympathetic indulgence.

The spring dinner was served at 6 o'clock sharp, after which President W. B. Kelly introduced Henry R. Harrower, toastmaster of the evening.

The principal feature of the evening was the poem contest, in which Dr. James A. Belyea read the first poem of the evening, entitled "You Just Ought to See Me and Miss Molly." He was fined $1 for copying the poem. This was followed by a poem by G. C. McConnell, entitled "Life on the Farm." The poem which won second award, "An Ode to Spring," was then given by its originator, George Thomas. After giving his offering Fred S. Hill acknowledged that the writing of the poem was the hardest work of his young life.

Henry Cantor then gave three musical numbers. These were "Absent," "God Touched the Rose," and "Values," after which he responded to an encore by the rendition of an aria from Rigoletto. All hands then joined in the singing of "A Good Old Summer Time," led by Capt. D. Ripley Jackson.

Fred E. Holt's poem, which was a pun on the names of the members of the club, was the next on the program, and this was followed by the "booby" number by A. Gelmor. On account of failing to have his poem ready, George B. White was fined. A poem by J. C. May entitled "Glendale's Progressive Business Club" was then given, this being followed by a poem by W. C. Waring, who was fined for leaving immediately after reading his section. D. Ripley Jackson came next with his number, entitled "P. E. P.," which was afterward termed "Pretty Expensive Poetry."

Attorney G. H. King was next with his offering, and stated that he could have done much better had he had the assistance of his wife. Poems were then read by Bert L. Klein and A. B. Castle. Arthur Sherborn of the Glendale News gave a very interesting poem which he claims was written at the last moment, but was among the best submitted. W. Q. Widdows of the Glendale Press, then favored the gathering with a poem entitled "Spring's Message." It was conceded by the judges that this poem possessed some merit, but was ruled out because of the fact that he had received the aid of his wife in "building" it.

W. C. Anspach followed with a series of stories as a prelude to his poem, which was lost on account

TUJUNGA TO JOIN SUNLAND IN CELEBRATION

Chamber of Commerce to Cooperate with the Sunland Body

TUJUNGA, June 27.—The Tujunga chamber of commerce is cooperating with the Sunland body in the preparation of a Fourth of July celebration to be held at Monte Vista park. The local body had originally planned a celebration at the Garden of the Moon, but this plan was abandoned in favor of the larger event.

It is planned to make everything inside the park free to the visitors, including dancing at the pavilion. Booths to house various concessions are being erected facing the park and the proceeds from his portion of the celebration are to be used in the improvement of the park.

Splendid cooperation is being given commensurate in charge of the affair and arrangements are nearly complete. It is expected that a large crowd will be attracted by the fame of the old oak trees and by the excellent facilities offered picnicers at the park.

Fire Truck Constructed
A Ford touring car has been purchased with funds secured through subscription by Leo Lang, deputy fire warden, and the body will be rebuilt to form a firetruck. Chemical apparatus and other fire fighting equipment formerly carried by the fire trailer will be put on the truck, and it is believed that much time will be saved in getting to fires in the future.

of the number of stories preceding it. S. S. Bern had a short poem, but was fined because he failed to confine his poem to terms strictly English. N. Ed Radke, the new jeweler in Glendale, had a real progressive poem, "Let's Go!" In this offering he portrayed the enthusiasm of the organization. George M. Lindsay's poem was on "The Pill Peddler," and had reference entirely to a member of the club.

The entire club then joined in singing the "Quitting Party," led by H. E. Cavanah, with Harry Girard at the piano. One of the brilliant musical numbers was the singing of "The Marseilles" by Dr. Henry H. Harrower, this stunt being performed in lieu of the payment of the $5 fine, which had been imposed earlier in the evening.

E. L. Westberg claimed that he did not shine as a poet, but the production that he gave indicated that he, in the course of time, would be able to rank with the very best. After the poems were all read, a lady's committee composed of Mrs. H. G. Westphal, Mrs. E. B. Sutton and Mrs. D. Ripley Jackson, was appointed to pass upon the merits of the poems, and to select the winners of the prizes. Members of the club who, after much discussion, were involved in the awarding of the prizes were each fined, upon recommendation of a musical committee composed of Messrs. Birard, Cavanah and Cantor. Harry Girard outlined to the club his plan of an annual May music festival and children's parade, which has heretofore been made public.

One of the outstanding poems was that of Dr. Henry R. Harrower, "Glendale is a Wondrous Home Place," written in the meter of Hiawatha. George Whitaker has a poem without a title, and W. B. Kelly gave the "Spirit of Progress." Secretary James Howarth had a clever poem, entitled "Beware." "Buzz" Sutton, who happens to be sergeant at arms, was too busy collecting fines, that he said he hadn't much time for poetry.

Mrs. Radke sang "I Know a Lovely Garden" and "The Dawn." The club expressed its thanks to Messrs. Cavanah and Cantor and to Miss Mildred Pray for their part in the musical program. The closing numbers were "The Star-Spangled Banner," "Farewell to Thee" and "Good Night Ladies."

Paintings 10,000 Years Old have been found in caverns of southern France and northern Spain.

FORBEARANCE
The words you said, they shall go on
Through all the round of days,
But those harsh words by you foregone,
So, too, shall they have praise.

The sweetness of thy spirit fill
The cup, a friend to bless,
But sweeter was thy spirit still
To withhold bitterness.

Thy judgments just shall bring thee praise,
But those thou dost not speak,
In Mercy, for them Honor lays
The tear upon thy cheek.

The tear that speaks the Right foregone,
And gentleness with Shame,
Shall be the jewel set upon
Thy crown in Mercy's name.

For all of treasure thou hast gained
The tongue of Pride hath stress,
But thy enfolded grasp restrained
Hath honored thee not less.

Thy silence sweet when Mercy bade
Thy heart be not forsworn,—
And God shall love thee and be glad
For that ye have forborne.

OBSERVATIONS

By the Oldest Inhabitant

You know the old saying: "Figgers won't lie, but truth defectors will figger." This is called by my mind by the wonderful figuring of the Pacific Electric railway experts showing why it was necessary in these piping times of peace, to almost double the Glendale rates. You remember what Jonas Harrison said in Eggleston's "End of the World" of Elder Hawkins' figgerin' on when the last day of the world was to come during the Millerite craze of 1843; "Ef he can't do it by addition he does it by subtraction, and if he can't do it by multiplication he does it by long division. But any way he works them prophecies of Daniel and Revelation they figgers out August 12, 1843." And so, no matter if wages paid Pacific Electric employees are far less than during the war, when the round trip fare was 25 cents and one-way 15 cents, no matter that the traffic has doubled in the past ten years, the figgers all point to 25 cents one way or 35 cents round trip. In 1910, when Glendale was a hamlet of less than 3000 people and Tropico boasted less than 2000, the fare was 15 cents one way and 25 cents round trip between Glendale and Los Angeles. The fare to and from Tropico was 10 cents. Then three-car trains were unknown and two-car not so plentiful. Now the population of the combined cities is fully 30,000 and in spite of the great increase in the number of autos the traffic has apparently trebled, for at least half the trains now are three-car and single cars are the exception. Yet a heavy increase in fare is necessary, according to the aforementioned weird "figgering." It is a case of where the wholesale rate is far in excess of the retail, which is contrary to established business principles. The yellow line in Los Angeles carries a passenger further for 5 cents, if he uses transfers judiciously, than the Pacific Electric Glendale line does for 38 cents.

The death of Dr. David W. Hunt removes one of the picturesque figures of Glendale. Many of us older inhabitants well remember seeing him rattling around in his buggy over Glendale's country roads, inches deep in dust. He was one of the old-fashioned country doctors then, looked upon almost as one of the family by all of his many patients. When the auto came in Dr. Hunt was the first man in Glendale to get one, and say, old residents, do you remember it? It was the same old buggy, with a little old gasoline engine installed, and a chain drive. Then one day the old buggy disappeared and a real auto, somewhat rattly, to be sure, succeeded it. This served his purpose for some time and then one unlucky day he misgauged the speed of an approaching Pacific Electric car at the Ninth street (now Windsor road) crossing and car and auto came together with an awful crash, the latter landing many yards away, splintered and broken into a thousand pieces. But strange to say, Dr. Hunt was not injured. It was not long until another machine was secured and the round of daily duties resumed. Do you remember James Fenimore Cooper's fascinating novel, "The Pioneers"? If you do, recall to your mind the pathetic story of old Natty Bumppo, the "Leatherstocking" hero of the five wonderful books called "The Leatherstocking Tales." He had roamed the trackless forests many long years in company with his faithful Indian friend and ally, Chingachgook, the "Big Serpent," and at last the two settled down on the shores of Otsego lake, which he first saw when a young hunter, and on whose placid bosom he had floated in his father's old ark. The "Glimmerglass" lake of those early times was then hundreds of miles from civilization in the very heart of the primeval forest and from its lower end flowed a little stream that many miles to the southward became the mighty Susquehanna river. In the days of "The Pioneers," the river still had its source in the lake, but the forests were thinning under the strokes of the woodman's axe. Here and there a real house appeared where once had stood the Indian wigwam. When the first house was built, old Natty cut a notch in the tree under which his cabin stood on the "vision," overlooking the lake. As each successive house arose, he cut another notch, until a row of six notches stood out before him and then his old heart broke and he besought his faithful Indian friend to pack up and move with him farther west, where the forest trees would be the only canopy between them and the heavens and the murmurs of the brooks the only sound to disturb the quiet of the day and night. I somehow imagine Dr. Hunt, was somewhat of a reincarnation of old Natty, in spirit at least. He had driven up and down the busy street of Glendale and out along the country byways, visiting his many patients for so many years. The auto replaced the faithful old horse and buggy, the electric car the homely conveyances of other days and the roaring city the quiet hamlet of earlier times. And I imagine that as these improvements came one by one, the good old-fashioned doctor grew sadder and sadder, until at last his old heart broke with longing for the dear old simple days of long ago.

Isn't it singular how man is never satisfied with the improvements that come with the advancing years? When you and I lived away back east and there were actually three trains a day to and from the big city a few miles away, we thought how wonderful it would be if there were only trains but three or four hours apart during the day. But now, when the interurban cars run every 15 or 20 minutes, how we rage and stamp the ground if we miss one car and have to wait a few minutes for the next one.

POCKET GOPHERS COST $8,000,000

Depredations of pocket gophers in California amount to not less than $8,000,000 a year, says Joseph Dixon, economic mammalogist of the University of California Museum of Vertebrate Zoology. In bulletin No. 340, "The Control of the Pocket Gopher in California," issued by the University of California Agricultural Experimental Station, Dixon tells how to distinguish the pocket gopher from other small animals of similar habits and describes the various methods of destroying gophers. The value of the natural enemies of the gopher and means of their encouragement are explained. A copy of Bulletin No. 340 may be secured by addressing the Director of the Agricultural Experimental Station.

SIDE LIGHTS ON CITY COUNCIL

Many Ordinances Changing Names of Streets

A protest was received from the property owners along Oak street, stating that they are not in favor of the proposed work and asked that a better street be installed. The representatives present stated that they are willing to put in a 3-inch concrete asphalt pavement. Contractor Ferry has already been awarded the contract for the cheap pavement. The members of the council stated they are in favor of having the better pavement put in provided Ferry is willing to release the city from its contract.

An ordinance of intention of the council to order the laying out and widening the first alley east of Brand boulevard, between Harvard and Colorado.

An ordinance was adopted changing the name of Mayhew street to Ivy street, avenue "A" to Camulus; Columbus place to Columbus avenue; Princeton drive to Cambridge drive, Vassar drive to Lafayette drive, Hill street to Post street, lot C tract No. 1374 M. B. to North Adams place, lots A and B, tract No. 1592 M. B. to Brent place, a part of Holly drive to Hill drive, a part of Columbus avenue to Spencer drive.

A petition was received from the property owners on Doran street between San Fernando road and Columbus street, asking that the board take steps for the improvement of that stretch. The city clerk was instructed to inform the petitioners that the council advised the improving of that street with 5-inch concrete asphalt.

A protest was received and ordered filed, protesting against the proposed work on Oak street, between Brand and Central. This protest was signed by Mrs. Blanch M. Bailey and about a dozen others.

City Manager Reeves reported that in answer to a communication from the F. P. Newport company regarding poor telephone service in the Verdugo Woodlands district, he had taken the matter up with Manager Fred Deal of the local branch of the Pacific telephone and telegraph company. Mr. Deal stated that he realized that the situation in Verdugo Woodlands was not entirely satisfactory, but that for the past several months he had been trying to care for those who had no service at all, at the same time trying to keep up the service in the Woodlands as promised. He promised, however, that something definite in the way of relief would be given the Woodlands within sixty days. Mr. Reeves was instructed to ask Mr. Deal to write the F. P. Newport company to that effect.

The city attorney and city engineer were instructed to draft the necessary proceedings for the adoption of a 5-inch Willite pavement for the improvement of Canada boulevard, which work has been under discussion for a long time.

In view of the fact that some weighty city park questions are coming up for solution in the near future, the city attorney was instructed to draft the necessary proceedings creating a parking commission of five members, who will serve without compensation, and designating the duties thereof.

A protest was received against the maintenance of a chicken ranch at 1340 North Pacific avenue. Sanitary Inspector Hollenbeck was instructed to draft an ordinance for submission to the board that will regulate institutions of this character.

After a little discussion with regard to the public camp grounds in Glendale, the city health officer and the city manager were instructed to visit these parking places and make recommendations as to their conduct and regulation.

Pat had worked hard and well for some years, and it struck his master that it was time the faithful fellow was given a raise in wages.

"Pat," said the master, "your wages are now 50 cents an hour, are they not?"
"Yes, sir."
"Well, I intend to raise them to 60 cents an hour in future."
"Stop a minute, sir!" exclaimed Pat. "If I lose two hours will I lose more?"
"Why, certainly," said the master.

"Bedad, thin," cried Pat, "I want a raise. I only lose one hour now."

GUARANTEED WARE OF ALUMINUM TO BE SOLD

Fisher's Variety Store Stages Sale of High Class Goods

Perhaps the largest, at least the most sensational, sale of aluminum ware of the season will open at Fisher's variety store, 212 East Broadway, tomorrow.

There have been many sales of aluminum ware held at various times, but there have never been such a sale of aluminum ware guaranteed to last 20 years.

The goods are priced at $1 and in size and weight, show the difference between the lightweight bargain goods and the heavier, more enduring sorts of goods.

The ware comes in all variety of kitchen utensils too numerous to mention. The doors of Fisher's will open for the sale at 9 o'clock. Phone orders will not be filled, none of the goods will be laid aside or sold until the hours of the sale. The proprietors reserve the right to limit the quantity sold to any one person.

There will be aluminum goods sold as low as one cent. The most costly will be $1.

IS YOUR MONEY GROWING OR ONLY GOING?

The man who stops in here regularly and invests a few dollars has the satisfaction of seeing his money grow.

The man who takes no thought for the morrow and sees his money go, a little here and a little there, has nothing to show for it.

A pass book with a long line of figures is a lot more satisfactory than a long memory of so-called good times.

Saving doesn't mean sacrifice—it is a pleasure and a great one. Start YOUR money growing by investing where you can get 5% to 7%, depending on the kind of account you select.
